Jazz at the Zoo is not over yet! We have two more free concerts in August before our summer season ends. More information is included in this issue as well as recaps from some of our July concerts and the Musician of the Year Banquet.

Also inside, you'll find a listing of live jazz shows around West Michigan and the schedule for the second GRandJazzFest on August 17 & 18.

So much jazz,
so little time...

Upcoming Jazz at the Zoo Concerts

Can you believe it's August already? Summer sure has flown by, as it always does. The West Michigan Jazz Society is pleased to present two more Jazz at the Zoo concerts in August. Like the nine concerts before these, the bands play from 6:30-8:30 p.m. at the John Ball Zoo Band Shell.

Jazz at the Zoo is free — with donations appreciated — and everyone is welcome. (Jazz-loving dogs may attend as long as they're well behaved.) The concerts happen light rain or shine, but in case of a bad weather cancellation, we'll announce it on our Facebook page and let the local television stations know.

See you at the Zoo!

Hello!

While the West Michigan Jazz Society is busy planning our fall/winter concerts and our holiday party, we still have two more Jazz at the Zoo concerts. And what an enjoyable summer concert series it's been! We are always thrilled to see the Zoo grounds packed with jazz fans each week.

We are also grateful for the generous donations we receive every week. Jazz at the Zoo has always been free so that everyone can attend, but since we pay the Zoo, the bands, and Kurt Ehinger (our sound man extraordinaire), it's nice when our costs are covered. If you're one of the people who pitched in this summer, THANK YOU! We appreciate you.

In our next issue, we'll share the dates and bands for our fall/winter series, which starts in October, and announce the date for our annual holiday party. Stay tuned — we think you'll like the lineup.

Jazz is alive and kicking in West Michigan and we are happy to be a part of it. Thank you for supporting WMJS and live jazz. Be sure to become a fan of ours on Facebook, too.

The 2013 Musician of the Year Banquet Honoring Randy Marsh

Written by Heidi Stukkie

The sheer amount of musical talent present at the B.O.B. on the evening of July 2 impressed every one of the 100 or so guests in attendance. Most of us will remember this night and its unforgettable musical performances for many years to come.

Each year, the West Michigan Jazz Society selects an exemplary musician who demonstrates talent and skill, while helping to promote jazz in our region. For 2013, we chose percussionist and harmonica player, Randy Marsh.

Marsh selected the band to play at the banquet honoring him, beginning with his 85-year-old father, legendary saxophonist Arno Marsh. He then chose five other incredible musicians to round out the band – Dr. Paul Brewer on trombone, Tim Froncek on drums, Paul Keller on bass, Chris Lawrence on trumpet, and Terry Lower on keyboard. And that was only the beginning.

Throughout the evening, many of Michigan's most gifted musicians joined in for a song or two. Vocalists Mary

Rademacher Reed and Libby York each sang a few songs, and musicians such as Elgin Vines, Greg Sergo, Tom Stansell, Dick Reynolds, Mark Kahny, Tom Lockwood, and more grabbed their instrument of choice and played as well. (I'm sure I'm missing quite a few names, but I had too much fun that night to take any notes; my apologies.)

Kurt Ehinger handled the sound system for the event and all night, we heard countless compliments about how superb the music sounded, from every corner of the room. Not only does Ehinger “know his stuff,” he generously donated his fee to our jazz student scholarship fund. (Thank you, Kurt!)

Marsh — who wore a giant smile all evening — received an award recognizing him as the Musician of the Year, a poster of the Jazz Notes article written about him, and he and his father were given lifetime memberships in the West Michigan Jazz Society.

All in all, the banquet was a remarkable evening of outstanding music and fun. Congratulations again, Randy!

Thank you to Christopher Wilson for taking these photos.

July 1: The Ides of Marsh

Written by Stephen M. Paulsen

This special evening paid tribute to Arno Marsh, the father of the 2013 WMJS Musician of the Year, Randy Marsh. Arno turned 85 this year and during the course of the concert, spoke about the turns of his career during that time.

He spoke fondly of his time touring with some of the big band era giants: Woody Herman, Stan Kenton, Buddy Rich, and others. Arno went on to tell of his time settling in to the Las Vegas scene where he has played in, or led, several of the bands that used to reside in the hotels.

This "Ides of Marsh" quintet had only been together for a week even though they all know each other and had played together previously. Prior to the Jazz at the Zoo event, they played up north for several nights as part of the annual World Class Jazz tour.

The band kicked off the first set with "Centerpiece" as the opener, then transitioned easily into the Ellington classic, "In A Mellow Tone." Next, Dr. Paul Brewer treated the audience to his vocal rendition of "These Foolish Things (Remind Me Of You)." Afterward, Dr. Robin Connell sang a bright and clear version of "So Many Stars."

Late in the first set and into the second set, the band showed off their versatility by attacking standards such as

Gershwin's "Summertime" with new fresh interpretations, and also brought lesser known tunes to bear with grace and talent.

During the second set, a student of Randy Marsh's, Madison George, sat in on the trap set for Sonny Rollins' standard "Doxy" in B-flat. Next, Marsh's friend, Paul Smith, sat in for "Running at the Mouth," an original piece by Randy Marsh, dedicated to and written for his father Arno.

Judging by the crowd and the playful fun the band had together that night, the "Ides of Marsh" concert was a true success.

July 8: The Fred Knapp Quartet

Written by Noelle Frost

Jazz at the Zoo sound man and emcee, Kurt Ehinger, began the concert on July 8 by commenting about the nice weather, despite earlier threats of rain — “Proving once again, Mother Nature is a jazz fan.”

Right from the start, The Fred Knapp Quartet took us all away from any potential weather woes to a great night of live jazz. The bandleader, local Grand Rapids drummer Fred Knapp, pulled in his two favorite trio players, Dave Proulx on keyboard and vocals and Dave Rosin on acoustic bass. This trio has played together consistently for over 10 years and it was immediately noticeable how much they enjoy their camaraderie.

Add to that mix Chicago transplant, sax player Mike Frost, and the band brought an especially diverse night of full band playing and wonderful improv solos. The toe-tapping opener was an original with no official name, but “affectionately referred to as ‘Dave’s Bounce’” according to the bandleader.

Proulx, in town for this performance from his new digs in North Texas, showed why his vocals are so popular when he deftly played and sang “I Get A Kick Outta You,” followed by the lovely “So Danco Samba” featuring Frost on a festive solo. Next, a Count Basie tune was amazingly introduced with bass and sax bantering between each other before the full band kicked in.

The Beatles classic “Blackbird” was then beautifully arranged and played by Proulx. “Straighten Up And Fly Right” and the Hank Mobley tune “This I Dig Of You” followed, the latter featuring the first drum solo of the evening by Knapp. A “quiet pin-drop moment” came over the crowd as the band played a stunning version of Oscar Peterson’s “Love Ballade,” which featured some amazing bow work by Rosin.

Favorites “Witchcraft” and “Honeysuckle Rose” rounded out the first set. “All the Things You Are,” “Just Squeeze Me,” “Sway,” and “Cheek to Cheek” kicked off the second set with lots of Proulx’s delightful vocals. A contemporary touch was given to the Monk fave “Round Midnight.” Nat King Cole’s popular “Sweet Lorraine” was next.

Afterward, Frost shared a story with the audience of his “jazz cat” Dexter. A hip tune inspired by him called “Vicious Dex-a-lic-ous” followed to the crowd’s delight. Ending the night, the classic “Stompin’ at the Savoy” brought the appreciative crowd to its feet, earning the quartet a standing ovation.

July 15: The Evan Hyde Group

Written by Andy Szumowski and Jason Lester

The sound hot sand makes, when you slowly pour five gallons of it onto a cold linoleum floor — that’s what Evan Hyde’s smooth, sizzling cymbals sounded like. Then, suddenly, the rest of the kit came rushing in like the roar of a powerful waterfall.

Hyde’s masterful smith work on the drum set enveloped the dense mugginess of the John Ball Zoo Band Shell the night of July 15. The humidity seemed to like the sound, and gave way to flourishes of something close to a breeze. Hyde’s explosive Kalashnikov rim clicks and deep Los Angeles bass drum vibed up the patio rockers and fold-up rollers on a deft, hip-ly stoic take of Kurt Rosenwinkel’s “Survival.”

“Moonlight in Vermont” seemed to drift the crowd away on a downy daydream carpet ride. The toe tapping rhythms by guitarist Matt Landon and bassist Jordan Richards had everyone grooving in the tropical heat. Pianist Keaton Royer, traded in his ivory for a funkier, chunkier vintage Fender Rhodes electric piano tone as he keyed in his focused dynamic comping on his elusive musical target: trumpeter Chris Lawrence.

Lawrence leapt leopard-like into long lavish lines, while Landon’s groove oriented comping ducked deceptively around Royer’s Rhodes. Jordan Richards held down trancelike grooves built around Hyde’s bottomless pocket. While some consider the potential conflicts of carrying both keys and guitar in a rhythm section a risk, Hyde gambled and won as these young rising stars weaved an intricate soundscape tapestry.

There was an ominous sense that the band was just burgeoning on the precipice of their true sonic identity when the skies opened up in protest and doused the crowd with relentless raindrops as colossal as Sonny Rollins’ saxophone sound on “Sonnymoon for Two,” another fine tune the quintet managed to squeeze in before the squall. Sometimes it pours, but this night, Evan Hyde and company undoubtedly reigned.
